The effective use of teachers' study meetings and the mailing list at Changchun, China

NISHITANI, Mari

This article reports on an existing network for teachers of Japanese language at Changchun, China. Both Chinese and Japanese teachers of Japanese participate in monthly study meetings, as well as in an E-mail service called "The mailing list." Teachers actively exchange information in this way. There are three reasons why this network is effective:

- 1) The study meeting bureau is efficient, and each member participates in the meeting independently.
- 2) Not only Japanese but also Chinese teachers of Japanese actively participate in the meeting.
- 3) The computer network, consisting of the mailing list and home page is used effectively.

Key-words: teachers of Japanese language, network for teachers, study meetings,
